The empire is, too, not overpopulated, and the Government have thus far set their faces against emigration. Under the circumstances, therefore, it is not astonishing that there has been no emigration from Japan. induce the immigration of Japanese into the Hawaiian Islands. No official statement fort has already fallen down. to that effect has been made, but there are evidences that the project is not viewed with disfavour by the Japanese Government. Mr. Inwin, agent of the new and enterprising Japanese Steamship Company, the Kiodo Unyu Kwaisha, has been to Honolulu to make arrangements. it is said. for the establishment of a mail service between Japan and Hawaii, and for further stated by a Tokio vernacular paper that the Hawaiian Government bacrequested that of Japan to send one thousand emi-1 always strictly accurate as to their facts, and it is more than probable that if any such communication has passed, it has been in the nature of a request that the Japanese Government would permit the emigration of Japanese subjects to the number of a thousand. We know that this step has been in contemplation, and was so before King KA-LARAUA'S visit to Japan, and it is most likely that an effort has just been made to secure a supply of immigrants from Japan. The Government and the planters of Hawaii are naturally anxious to recruit the popula, tion, which is only kept up at all by immigration, as the natives decrease annually, and they decidedly object to the Chinese element being increased. The Chinese de confiscated that will bring up the total amount not, as a rule, take their wives and families. and therefore are seldom permanent residents; they are disliked very strongly by the other races; and if their influx were unrestricted there would be great danger of their becoming the dominant section of the population. The majority of the daily periodicula advocate the adoption of the strictest neutrality, with a view to keeping France from ponching on Japan's preserves. There can be no manner of doubt, lowever, that, while the dictates of prudence, ustice, and common-sense prompt the press of Jupan to write against France, there is a strong of 40 cents will be charged on foreign ships, knocked off work after scraping her bottom. There is, in addition to this, a strong pro-French party in the Army and Navy, for the former owes much of its present fine condition to the able instruction of competent Franch officers. The Navy is English at heart for the same ronson, but sympathizes also with France, though in a less degree. On the whole, the position of Japan, although of such vital importance to China and to France, as well, is not an enviable one just at present. Qualified or partial neutrality, and this seems the only practicable course, means secret help to France, and offending Chins. However powerful this Government may be in the abstract, the difficulty of preventing its subjects from siding with the victorious party is incalculably great. And then there is that perplexing and wholly incomprehensible Treaty between China and Japan constantly making its appearance like a restless spirit. "Rest, perturbed one!" is the ery of Japan; but it is only too probable steps General Soon had taken for blocking up that there is mischief in the incossant reappearance of this ugly question. PRINCE KUNG'S INTRIGUING

According to a well-informed correspondent (says the St. James's Gäzette), Prince Kung has really been guilty of a rather dangerous intrigue. The informant savs:--

Asiatic politics are proverbially difficult to understand and of all Orientals the Chinese are as apt to reveal secrets in China as in other countries; and events which a few weeks ago were shronded in mystery are now dimly appearing within the range of popular knowledge. The direction of affairs, was as perclexing to the Enranean observer as the sucrender of Soutay and Bac-nink was astonishing to all who had listento the reports of the preparations made for the defence of those cities. But many effects spring sometimes from one cause; and it is plain from facts which have recently become known that both the revolution at Peking and the surrender of Sontay and Bac-ninh admit of one interprets

In China the advocates of "Progress" are often in danger of being ground to powder between the upper and nether millstones of foreign pressure and the reactionary pelicy of the antitheir own policy or resigning office, they re-cognize as permissible the subtler course of noften their opponents. This was the spirit in concessions should be made to the French, and at the same time his continuance in office depended on his assuming the role of an unvielding patriot among his colleagues at Peking. In these ciring the entrance. Since the Cockchafer re-entered | cumstances he thought it no harm to come to an understanding with the French that Sontay and tance open their gates to the invaders; and at the same time he undertook that the commanders quiet and pleasant in their manner towards for- of these cities should play their part in the farce eigners, but within the past few days the garri- of war. How successfully this portion of the son has been added to and the new arrivals have programme was carried out we all know; but, unfortunately for the Prince, he had further to deal with a man who proved unwilling to act as catspaw to his Imperial Highness. In order to has been offered. General Soon, commanding carry out his arrangements with the French, it these troops, is known to be friendly towards all | was necessary that Ts'en Yu-ving, the Viceroy of Yun-nan and Kwei-chow, should withdraw his troops from Tonquin. The Prince, therefore, gave him an order to retire within the frontiers. This he did: and in apparent innocence reported to the Throne the successful accomplishment of the manouvre.. David's reception of the news of the death of King Saul cannot have astonished the young Amalekite more than did the way this news was received at Peking surprise Te'en. The Empress Regent expressed her indignation at the degrant disregard of the imperial mandates which the Viceroy had shown, and commanded that the offender should be handed over to the Beard of Civil Office for the determination of his punishment. This sudden company with the District Mugistrate, sent for change of front suggested to Te'en the possibithe Catholic priest to meet them in a convenient lity that the despatch which contained his orders place, and there informed him that it would be to retire from Tonquin may have been a forged impossible for them to guarantee him protection one, and he therefore forwarded it to Peking under the existing circumstances.
